

AN IMPLANTABLE DEVICE WITH SENSORS FOR DIFFERENTIAL MONITORING OF INTERNAL CONDITION

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention is directed to implantable devices and systems for the differential monitoring the condition of the tissue or fluid emitted from the site in proximity to the implants. The invention may also include modifications of the implantable device to stabilize or immobilize the device in the proximity of the tissue to be monitored.